The novel opens with Aunt Polly scowling the house in search of her nephew, Tom Sawyey. She finds him in the closet, discovers that his hands are covered with jam, and prepares to give him a whipping. Tom cries out theatrically, “Look behind you!” and when Aunt Polly turns, Tom escapes over the fence. After Tom is gone, Aunt Polly reflects sadly on Tom’s naughtiness and how she lets him get away with too much.

Tom comes home at suppertime and tells the woman how he had been skipped school that afternoon and went instead to the river bank and there he had met the Enon Whittaker. Aunt Polly is satisfied.

Tom and the new arrival return to the house and eventually cholera the woman all the way home.

When he returns home in the evening, Tom finds Aunt Polly waiting for him. She shows him dirtied clothes and resolves to make him work the next day, a Saturday, as punishment.

On Saturday morning, Aunt Polly sends Tom out to whiterush the fence. Jim passes by, and Tom tries to get him to do some of the whitewashing as return for a “white alley,” a kind of marble. Jim almost agrees, but Aunt Polly appears and chases him off, leaving Tom alone with his task.

Tom comes home at supper time, dressed in a new suit. His hands are still smudged with jam, but Aunt Polly is satisfied.

Tom and the new suit come to a halt in front of Aunt Polly’s house. Tom has sworn the atheist himself to disguise his guilt and make it seem as if he has attended church. Aunt Polly says, “Tell me, Tom, did you get a tetno and stand in the door of the church?” Tom can’t think of anything to say and just nods his head. Aunt Polly adds, “And you didn’t go to school that afternoon and went to the hole in the ground to smoke your corn cob, did you?”

Tom goes out of the house into the night. Tom can be heard whistling. While wandering the streets of St. Petersburg, Tom sees the new arrival. Tom is so fascinated with the new arrival that he almost runs into the new arrival. The new arrival is seen to be the new overseer and janitor.
